

Beth Hale
Executive Vice President and Chief Consumer and Business Solutions Officer

With decades of financial services experience, Beth Hale serves as BECU's executive vice president and chief consumer and business solutions officer.

As chief consumer and business solutions officer of Washington's largest credit union, Beth leads the teams accountable for creating and managing products and services across all BECU lines of business.

Prior to BECU, Beth served as the president and vice chair of USAA Savings Bank, where she developed a strategic roadmap to improve the organization's risk profile and operations. She was also responsible for presiding over all board of director meetings, developing positive relationships with regulators and managing teams focused on operations, financial performance and regulatory reporting, compliance and risk domains. Before that, she held senior positions at Washington Mutual and Bank of the West.

Beyond the office, Hale supports her local community in many ways. She served on the board of directors of YMCA of Southern Nevada over the past four years and has also volunteered at various organizations including Habitat for Humanity, Food Bank of Buffalo, New York and St. Joan of Arc Roman Catholic Church. Hale holds a Bachelor of Business Administration degree from University of Massachusetts, Amherst.
